

The koru design which is inspired by the punga (New Zealand fern) represents new life, personal growth, positive change and awakening. It is associated, too, with peace and harmony, so makes a wonderful gift for a new parent or child, or anyone starting out on a new pathway.

Maybe this is a time to get pēpi his own taonga or show him a whānau pounamu that the whole whānau use.

Te Hinengaro Miharo

Baby's experiences build new connections in his brain. These become memories. The more positive the experiences, the happier the memories.

His brain receives information best when he sees, hears and touches at the same time.

His brain is making connections about how his actions affect other people.

Want to learn more about what else is happening in baby's amazing brain? Check out Whakatipu
www.skip.org.nz